Success Indicators

The following indicators will demonstrate the level of compliance with this policy and its procedures:

- a) Managers have identified with their staff any Lone Working which is taking place
- b) Managers must consider whether this Lone Working is necessary and if the practice can be avoided.
- c) Managers must identify who is carrying out Lone Working and when this is taking place.
- d) Managers (with their staff) have assessed the risk of lone working and defined how the risk can be eliminated or reduced by introducing control measures.
- e) Control measure have been developed and communicated to all staff
- f) The use of control measures is monitored by managers.
- g) The risk assessment and any control measures are reviewed regularly and after any incident are reported.
- h) Staff are aware of the requirement to report any incidents which occur when working alone.

1. Application

This policy applies to all County Council workplaces and work situations

2. Introduction

"Lone working" in the context of this policy refers to staff who work by themselves without close or direct supervision who may be at risk when working alone.

In some jobs within the County Council, staff may have to work alone. Lone working is not considered to be hazardous under normal situations and lone working does not, in itself, create a risk to staff.

Physical risk could include hazards from equipment and machinery being operated, the type of work being carried out or violence or physical harm from others in the vicinity.

Lone workers are found in a wide range of situations which can be site based or mobile. Examples of staff that may be considered Lone Workers are staff;

- who may be working in premises physically separated from colleagues e.g. reception areas
- who may be working outside normal working hours e.g. "on call" staff
- working alone in the community e.g. libraries
- working in non County Council premises e.g. visiting the homes of County Council service users.

 who may be the only staff member present in a County Council establishment and / or may be without access to immediate assistance.

Managers have the responsibility of defining whether an employee is a lone worker. This can be done by identifying the hazards of the work, assessing the risks involved, and putting measures in place to avoid or control the risks.

It is important to consult with employees, examine job descriptions, determine what duties employees should be doing and review the service provided by the team on a regular basis.

(For a definition of the term Lone Worker see Glossary of Terms)

3. Aims and Objectives

Managers will ensure as far as is reasonably practicable that employees who work alone are protected through a process of risk assessment and risk elimination. Where elimination of risk is not possible, managers and staff must work towards reducing risks to as low a level as is reasonably practicable.

4.0 The Arrangements for Applying the Policy

4.1. Risk Assessment

Managers and staff must work together to define those members of staff who may be considered a "lone worker" by the nature of the tasks being carried out and the location and duration of this work.

In all cases it should be considered whether lone working is necessary and if the practice can be avoided. If this is not possible and lone workers have been defined, managers have a duty to risk assess the work situation and define how the risk can be eliminated or reduced by introducing control measures.

Managers must follow five steps to risk assess lone working.

STEP 1 IDENTIFY THE HAZARDS

The hazards of lone working should be recorded. (It is important to remember that working alone in itself is not necessarily hazardous.) Discussions with staff members should take place to identify if employees feel aspects of their work could involve hazardous lone working.

A checklist of lone working may be used to define the hazards more clearly, this should be completed by the manager and the staff member or team who may be working alone. (See Appendix 1)

STEP 2 RECORD WHO MIGHT BE HARMED AND HOW

Where hazardous lone working has been identified managers must define which staff members and which roles within the team are carrying out "lone working".

STEP 3 ASSESS THE RISK AND IMPLEMENT CONTROL MEASURES

Managers must consider in the first instance whether lone working is necessary and try to avoid the need for lone working if possible.

Where lone working will take place, managers must assess the risks and define and implement control measures to reduce this risk.

Establishing safe working for lone workers is no different from organising the safety of other employees therefore managers must conduct the risk assessment process as they would for any other work situation.

Risk assessments for site based lone workers should include:

- the provision of safe access and exit
- risk of violence
- safety of equipment or materials for use by the individual when on their own
- · channels of communication in an emergency
- site security and security arrangements
- level and adequacy of on/off site supervision

When considering risk assessments, lone workers should not be at more risk than other employees.

Managers must establish risk controls and precautions and these should take account of normal work and foreseeable emergencies, e.g. fire, equipment failure, illness and accidents.

When a risk assessment shows that it is not possible for the work to be done safely by a lone worker, this should be defined in writing and arrangements for controlling the risk should be put in place e.g. written guidelines for working when two officers or more may be needed.

Control measures for any lone working situation may include;

- Induction processes (e.g. dual visits/completion of training courses prior to lone working)
- Job specific instruction and training (e.g. in anticipating and diffusing potential conflict where lone workers may encounter this)
- Required levels of supervision (e.g. where this is appropriate for the individual, the job or the risk)
- Electronic devices and equipment (e.g. mobile phones, automatic warning devices or alarms)
- Written working procedures (e.g. signing in and out of base, keeping to written schedules)

Managers should take steps to check that control measures are used and review the risk assessment regularly to ensure it is still adequate. Staff must implement any control measures, take part in any training and follow the rules and procedures designed for safe lone working.

Further information on control measures and action to reduce lone worker risk can be found in Guidance G01/HR117 & HR118 "Lone Working and Violence and Aggression Risk Reduction Measures"

STEP 4 RECORD THE FINDINGS

Managers must ensure that the details of the lone working risk assessment are recorded on the risk assessment record for the staff member/ post. Risk assessments and their associated control measures must be communicated to staff and others who may be affected by its contents.

Managers are responsible for ensuring that staff are aware of the control measures to be used in all situations, and the requirement placed upon them to follow and/or use control measures as laid down in the assessments.

STEP 5 REVIEW THE ASSESSMENT

Managers must review the risk assessment periodically or when a change has occurred in the type of work or work location. The circumstances of the individual must also be taken into account when reviewing the risk assessment.

4.2. Training

It is important that staff are equipped with skills and techniques to deal with any risks that may arise during lone working. This may include training to deal with specific risks such as the risk of aggressive behaviours or training on personal safety.

Staff must be able to operate any equipment allocated to them to be specifically used whilst working alone.

Information and instruction on all safe working procedures must be given to the lone worker and their knowledge must be updated as necessary.

Managers must ensure that training takes place and is refreshed regularly.

4.3. Incident reporting

Any incident which occurs involving a lone worker must be reported immediately and investigated thoroughly by the individual's manager. If the staff member has been injured the appropriate Accident Investigation Form or Violent Incident Report Form must be completed.

If an incident has occurred the manager must also review the lone working arrangements and the risk assessment for the job as soon as possible after the incident.

5. Legislative Framework

- 1. The Health and Safety at Work Act 1974.
- 2. The Management of Health and Safety at Work Regulations.
- 3. The Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences. Regulations (RIDDOR).

6. Related Factsheets

HSE Leaflet - Working Alone in Safety INDG 73 HR118 Management of Violence and Aggression

7. Glossary of Terms

HSE defines a lone worker as:

Someone who works by themselves without close or direct supervision who may be at risk when working alone. Lone workers include those who:

- work from a fixed base, such as one person working alone on a premises (eg, receptionist);
- work separately from others on the same premises (eg cleaners);
- work outside normal hours;
- work away from a fixed base (eg, surveyors, community care workers, caretakers);
- work at home (homeworkers); and
- mobile workers (eg, attendant drivers, highway inspectors).
